

Introducing ERWC 12: Portfolios and Metacognition

MODULE OVERVIEW

Grade 12

Module Type	Portfolio
Length of Instructional Time	5 days
Module Summary	The purpose of this portfolio module is to introduce twelfth grade students to ERWC 12; give them an opportunity to reflect upon and write about their reading, writing, thinking, and goal setting processes; review the importance of establishing and maintaining a portfolio; and learn about metacognitive processes while reading in order to improve comprehension.
Questions at Issue	• How will each student obtain and maintain a portfolio for ERWC 12? • What do students know now about their reading, writing, and thinking processes? • What is metacognition? How can students apply metacognitive knowledge and skills to their reading processes?
Module Texts	Arnold, Matthew. "Dover Beach." New Poems, 1851. Poetry Foundation, 2019, www.poetryfoundation.org/poems/43588/dover-beach. Keats, John. "Ode on a Grecian Urn." Annals of the Fine Arts, January 1820. Poetry Foundation, 2019, www.poetryfoundation.org/poems/44477/ode-on-a-grecian-urn. ▪ The poems listed in this module are used to demonstrate and discover what readers do when they process texts and construct meaning for those texts; they are not intended to be analyzed for rhetorical devices but to help students understand more deeply that thinking about their thinking as they read—metacognition—continues to be helpful to them as they become more expert learners.
Culminating Task	At the end of this module, students are asked to write a letter to themselves in which they formulate learning goals for the course that they believe are likely to contribute to their success in ERWC 12.
Rhetorical Concepts	Although rhetorical concepts are not included directly in any activities within this portfolio module, students will be exposed to many, if not most, of the concepts used in ERWC as they describe in their own language the course's learning goals. Furthermore, when doing think-alouds to demonstrate reading processes, teachers may recognize and describe rhetorical concepts relevant to the specific text.

Objectives	Integrated ELD: • Understand how their portfolios will be kept during the course and how they will be used to monitor their progress toward achieving learning goals • Explain what the learning goals for the ERWC 12 course are and how those goals are relevant to them in their own language • Understand ERWC learning goals and set personal learning goals • Understand what metacognition while reading is and how to apply metacognitive skills and knowledge to their own reading
Potential Mini-Module Pairings	• This portfolio module is not intended to be paired with any particular mini-modules as it focuses on students' metacognitive skills and, as the initial module for the school year, is setting the foundation for what students should expect in the ERWC 12 course.
