

Waste More, Want More
MODULE OVERVIEW
Grade 12 ERWC with Integrated and Designated ELD
Module Type	Issue
Length of Instructional Time	2-3 weeks
Module Summary	American's consumer culture results in immense waste production. The op-ed article "Waste More, Want More" by Andrew Lam critiques the global impact of this lifestyle. In addition to raising important questions about garbage and lifestyle choices, Lam's article also speaks to immigrant experiences and the international influence of American values. Students will have multiple angles of approach to these issues.
Questions at Issue	• How does waste production impact the environment? • What is "American consumerism"? • To what extent has human garbage production harmed the environment? • What should communities do to improve waste management and/or limit waste production?
Module Texts	Lam, Andrew. "Waste More, Want More: America Throws Out Good Food." New America Media, NewAmericaMedia.org, 24 Aug. 2012. ▪ This text is the cornerstone for this module as it explores Americans' wasteful consumerism, especially when it comes to food waste. GreenWaste Recovery. "Wasteline: A Publication for GreenWaste Recovery Single-family Customers." Summer 2017 Newsletter. ▪ While intended as a Designated ELD text, this publication provides tips to minimize food waste and maximizing recycling efforts.
Culminating Task	Students will have their choice of taking rhetorical action through one of two ways: research or advocacy. Students who chose the research option will interpret and synthesize multiple sources that deepen their audience's understanding of the issue. The research option will thus be a reading-based argument essay that may respond directly to Lam's article as one of the sources. Students who chose the advocacy option will develop a communication plan and artifacts (e.g., PSAs, emails, posters, digital stories, tweets, policy recommendations, infographics, etc.) directed at changing their audience's response to the issue.
